demand was made of this in Honoldus. This appears to us to be an evasion.

Wehave examined the plaintiff's accounts at large and called on him to explain various discrepancies appearing in them and further appearing by comparison with accounts kept by the Deputy Sheriff. His explanations are evasive and unsatisfactory. His method of keeping accounts is such that fraud cannot be detected. LEECHAT, A BANKBUPT, VS.-W. S. AKANA, ACHO AND AR YAU, ALIAS CHANG YAU. Before Chancellor Judd. Opinion of the Court. The plaintiffs are assignees of Lee Chat, a sankrupt. On the 27th of March 1883, Chang Yau, a small trader in Hilo, after having heard that amall trader in Hile, after having heard that Lee Chat, to whom he owed a considerable sum of money, had absconded the Kingdom, made a chattel mortgage of all his stock of dry goods, provisions, &c., "and all other goods, wares and morehandies now in my store on Front st., town of Hile," to W. S. Akana and Acho to secure four promissory notes in favor of Akana amounting to $500 and one in favor of Acho of $500. The notes and mortgages were made payable on demand, and payment of them all was demanded the next day, March 28th. Possession of the goods in the store was taken by Akana a few days later and sold at auction about a month later, the and sold at auction about a month later, the sale realizing about $1,400. Judgment was also confessed on these notes by defendant sale realizing about $1,400. Judgment was also confessed on these notes by defendant Chang Yau in the Police Court of Honolulu. The bill prays inter also that the mortgage may be adjudged fraudulent and void as against the plaintiffs. It is in evidence that Chang Yau, some six or seven months previous, desiring to open a store in Hilo borrowed $50. of Akana (whose wife was his cousin) to pay for his retail license, and a month later Akana advanced him $300 as capital. About this time Ali Yau came to Honolulu and bought goods of Lee Chat and had them.

and bought goods of Lee Chat and had them-marked in Akana's name. There is some tes-timeny to the effect that Akana guaranteed or ecame surety for this account, but I am not t liberty to consider it, for in an action tried to this Court to hold Akana thus liable was ecided adversely to this position and it is goods as ordered to Chang Yau, and received occasional remittances. After Leo Chat absoended, his assignees in bankruptcy recovered a judgment against Chang Yau for $2,600 and it is still unsatisfied. Meanwhile Akana paid a bill of $150 for lumber used in fitting up the store.

The amount of $500 for which Chang Yau gave his note to Ache one day before the mort-gage was made, need not be considered, as Ache was not served with process, being absent in China,

I think it is clear from the evidence in the case that Akana had reasonable cause to believe that Chang Xan was insolvent when he ness. His haste in getting a mortgage executed, made by its terms payable on demand after he heard that Lee Chaf had abscooded leaving large indebtedness, and knowing that prompt measures would be taken by Lee Chaf a creditors to collect all available assets.

Chancellor on his side, calculates upon using the French premier, something like the maid of all work. The French commence to see, that in backing up the sovereign rights of the people on the Congo, Bismarck has paudered to their weakness and appetite for territory; knowing full well that it saddles there with portant duties which signify moo and mil lions; which will be a source of weakness if France be engaged in any serious war; while ind it to be well sustained by proofs. The reacce be engaged in any serious war, while in the piping times of puace, England, America welling in the district until lately. We cannot admit his excuse as sufficient for the long continuous absences. He was bound by accepting office to be in his district at least on stated days of every week, at some known, and if possible convenient locality. But he is further shown to have failed to attend at the day appointed for trials, whereby numbers of person were kept waiting for him till afterprocess were kept waiting for him till after-star"-Alsace-Lorrai ENGLAND'S ATTITUDE. From this sketch it appears that there are many delinquencies and errors of this magistrate to be condenued.

It is possible to take a charitable view of his conduct and to find that he is not guilty of fraud or of willful neglect of duty. He has but two months now remaining of his term of two years. There can he so judgment of suspension from office, for the law does not provide for it, moreover the office cannot be left vacant. In view of the brief time remaining, and of the consideration that the examination now had with the instruction and consure of and of the consideration and consure of the Court upon the irregularities and deficiencies discovered, may correct the irregularities of his administration; we are of opinion that the public service will not suffer by allowing the supplication that the Prince is only making a cats-paw of France, or, that England has her plant to certainly. really in earnest to trip her up, to commer the dismemberment project. She has only whisper a word to the French Generals, that she was not indisposed to lending a hand to she was not indisposed to lending a mana bringing back Alsace to the fold, and all treaties, oftenseve and defensive, with German would vanish. Russia might seek then to im prove the occasion, rounding all her western frontiers, and as for German colonies and the German fleet, M. Bismarak might make his mind casy on that score. There are more than Englishmen who would not put up with the new role of Fatherland, that of organizing a lagonism between States, in order to perm her to enrich herself from their ruins, or repose in a strength based on the struggles of others. These views are correct and well weighed in the thinking classes, and from the programme of the politicians that must in due course succeed to the reins of power. due course succeed to the rains of power.

THE CHINESE QUESTION.

France does not follow with a light heart
the dispatch of fresh regiments to Tonquin.
That which weighs on the situation, is to ascertain how is the whole matter to end? After driving John Chinaman across the border, what next, and next? An expedition to Pekin, replies professional and diplomatic opinion. To demand such, will be a test act for the country. In the mean time events depend on the fortunes of war. The stronger France strikes he more the blow will be re-echoed. It is only with Western powers that Bismarck has nfluence. He cannot apparently, weigh on the Empress of China and her Conucil, no ntice or press, Russia or Japan to make THE EGYPTIAN QUESTION

The Egyptian question is considered to form part of the general plan of the new foreign re-lations that England is suspected of hatching. It is not the bondholders that now occup serious consideration, but will Europe be pr pared to fight England out of Egypt, if th English nation makes up its mind resolutely that it will not abandon that country after having made so many sacrifices to set it on its feet. The symptoms of England to adopt a more vigorous colonial policy, do not add any comfort to the situation, where so much gun-powder is lying about. It is being felt, that powder is lying about. It is being left, that if England does not desire or court war, she will not hesitate to strike rapidly and strong, if others open the ball. The confederation of her colonies for mutual defence, is now regarded as a foregone conclusion. As a colonier nial power, it is a necessity for her to we pind all the faggots. POLITICS.

The opposition is chanting a refrain over the fate of the country, because one milliard, instead of the three composing the budget, has been voted by the Parliament. The dirgo is only platonic. Of course it would have been better had legislators completed their work within the 1884 session, and not have to compare to the new year with an arrear of business. within the 1884 session, and not have to com-mence the new year with an arreat of business. The delay will not add to, or take from, the burden of taxation. The postporement only means the waste of time. The protections are about the merriest set of follows at the close of the year. They have wen all before them. A free trader can hardly raise his lead; he would almost be hunted out of the country or gratuitously supplied with a tar lieve that Chang Xau was insolvent when he took the mortgage upon his stock in trade Loo Ngawk testifies that Akama admitted to him that he knew that Chang Xau owed Lee Chat over $2000. Having married his cousin and allowing him to have his goods sent in his name, and advancing him noney for his license and for fitting up his store, it cannot be supposed that in a small town where the business was under his daily observation he could have been ignorant of the condition of Chang Yau's business. His haste in getting a mortgage execution. However, bread riots never can assume any importance in France; they are included under the category of riots in general, and so to be suppressed. A neglected riot is the pre-cursor of a revolution; what would precipitate matters, would be a six weeks continued frost

Chat's creditors to collect all available assets, his haste in taking possession, closing the store and selling the goods are to my mind all indicts of fraud. He certainly knew that the money he advanced to pay for license and for fitting up the store was not invested in the goods he seized and which realized at an auction sale more than his whole debt, and that Chane Yan was without capital except as the Chane Yan was without capital except as the costumes and such accessories. But that auction sale more than his whole debt, and that Chang Yau was without capital except as he supplied it and that the stock of goods was procured on crudit, and that the short time (a few months) in which he was in business had not sufficed to enable Chang Yau to pay his Headalu creditor from his profits. I cannot conduct him as bounded particularly represented by the statute.

I pass now to another point made by the complainants. The certificate of acknowledgment to the nortyne is as follows:

"Hile, Hawaii

Coming in contact with the atmosphere, great heat is gener ated and the meteor is broken in pieces The most common meteors are stone and cannot be found because they resen ble stones on the earth's surface. It Siberia and South America the most are found. Where they come from has caused much discussion. One theory is that meteors originally came from the earth Bismarck somehow manages to keep uppermost in the French mind. He is the hope of a few, the fear of several, and an object of detestation for the many. M. Ferry seems to have staked his political fortune on the loyal intentions of the "thouset broker," while the Change like subject and sent revolving around the sun. When the earth in its orbit comes near one of these wandering meteors it attracts it and it plunges into the earth. Any stone thrown at the rate of six miles a second would not return to the earth again, but would be thrown outside of its attractive power. Every one of these must in time enter the orbit of the earth, and must, of course, return to it.—Exchange.
